

ABSTRACT

A number of bits that can be allocated to each tone is calculated for each communication apparatus, an individual bit allocation is determined for each communication apparatus, and communication apparatuses are managed by being divided into masters and slaves. This makes it possible to secure a transmission rate without requiring labor and cost for the work of installing a blocking filter or the like, and to achieve connection between the low-speed communication apparatus and the high-speed communication apparatus.